

NHS ! SOS !

A NATIONAL DAY OF
ACTION AGAINST NHS
CUTS AND PRIVATISATION
SATURDAY MARCH 3RD

Oxford

Assemble at 12 noon Bonn Square
March to Manzil Way, East Oxford for 1 p.m.

STOP SERVICE CUTS
STOP JOB CUTS
STOP PRIVATISATION

Protest in support of the national initiative by joint NHS unions 'NHS Together' organised by the Oxford & District Trades Union Council, Keep Our NHS Public and UNISON Oxfordshire Health.

NHS ! SOS !

A NATIONAL DAY OF
ACTION AGAINST NHS
CUTS AND PRIVATISATION
SATURDAY MARCH 3RD

Oxford

Assemble at 12 noon Bonn Square
March to Manzil Way, East Oxford for 1 p.m.

STOP SERVICE CUTS
STOP JOB CUTS
STOP PRIVATISATION

Protest in support of the national initiative by joint NHS unions 'NHS Together' organised by the Oxford & District Trades Union Council, Keep Our NHS Public and UNISON Oxfordshire Health.

What is happening to our NHS?

- NHS trusts with deficits have had to make hasty cuts to staff and patient services, rather than being given the time to make proper plans.
- There has been too much, too rapid reorganisation imposed from above.
- The rapid expansion of the private sector and increased competition between different parts of the NHS is fragmenting the NHS and stopping health staff work together for the good of patients.

Where's all the money gone?

- A lot of the extra funds is going towards meeting the costs of private companies that are being encouraged to take over NHS services. More privatisation means more money being siphoned off for profit, and less for patient care. The public is footing the bill for this.
- More NHS money is being spent on running the new health market.

Can the market deliver decent health care?

The UK has had a public health system for nearly 60 years. It is renowned around the world, and is the most efficient and cost effective system in existence.

It has suffered greatly for decades from under-investment in comparison with other countries health systems.

Breaking it up to compete with private health companies is not a solution to the problems lack of funds has caused the NHS.

What is happening to our NHS?

- NHS trusts with deficits have had to make hasty cuts to staff and patient services, rather than being given the time to make proper plans.
- There has been too much, too rapid reorganisation imposed from above.
- The rapid expansion of the private sector and increased competition between different parts of the NHS is fragmenting the NHS and stopping health staff work together for the good of patients.

Where's all the money gone?

- A lot of the extra funds is going towards meeting the costs of private companies that are being encouraged to take over NHS services. More privatisation means more money being siphoned off for profit, and less for patient care. The public is footing the bill for this.
- More NHS money is being spent on running the new health market.

Can the market deliver decent health care?

The UK has had a public health system for nearly 60 years. It is renowned around the world, and is the most efficient and cost effective system in existence.

It has suffered greatly for decades from under-investment in comparison with other countries health systems.

Breaking it up to compete with private health companies is not a solution to the problems lack of funds has caused the NHS.